His companion, Miss Kathleen Burns, 16, Waynesboro, was only slightly injured, sustaining several cuts.

Smith was driving west at a high rate of speed, according to state motor police, when the accident occurred. Miss Burns managed to crawl up the steep embankment and hail a passerby who took her to Waynesboro. Considerable difficulty was encountered in extricating Smith's body from the wrecked car.

The youngster was crossing the highway to a mail box opposite his home at Wayne Heights, east of Waynesboro, when the accident occurred. His mother, who was standing on the porch of her home about 300 feet away, witnessed the tragedy.

Mrs. Barkdoll stated the accident was entirely the lad's fault as he looked only in one direction and stepped into the path of the Fitz machine after a truck had gone by.

Mr. Fitz is the father of 10 children.

Dr. Shull, Franklin county coroner, will conduct an inquest on Friday afternoon.

The body of Wyatt Ray Weddle, 37, who lived with his sister, Mrs. Alva Oberholzer, Waynesboro, was found in his automobile this morning at 8 o'clock along the Rouzeville-Harbaugh church road.

An investigation will be held.

Two Cars Sideswipe, Injuring Three Persons

Two cars sideswiped Sunday evening on the Hanover road, three quarters of a mile east of here injuring three persons and causing about $160 damage to the cars involved. The crash occurred about 6:45 o'clock.

Melhorn, who suffered cuts of the scalp and left leg was given first aid treatment at the scene by Dr. James B. Goynes, Gettysburg; S. J. Hawn, Gettysburg, R. 5, an occupant of the Melhorn car left the scene for medical treatment. His injuries were reported not serious. The only occupant of the other car who was injured was Mrs. C. Sanders, 59, Hanover R. 4. She was taken to the Hanover General hospital with bruises of the right knee and possible rib fractures.

Meckley was driving toward Gettysburg and Melhorn in the opposite direction when the cars sideswiped. The Melhorn car was towed to Bonneauville.

Officer John Micka, of the Gettysburg substation of the state motor police, investigated.

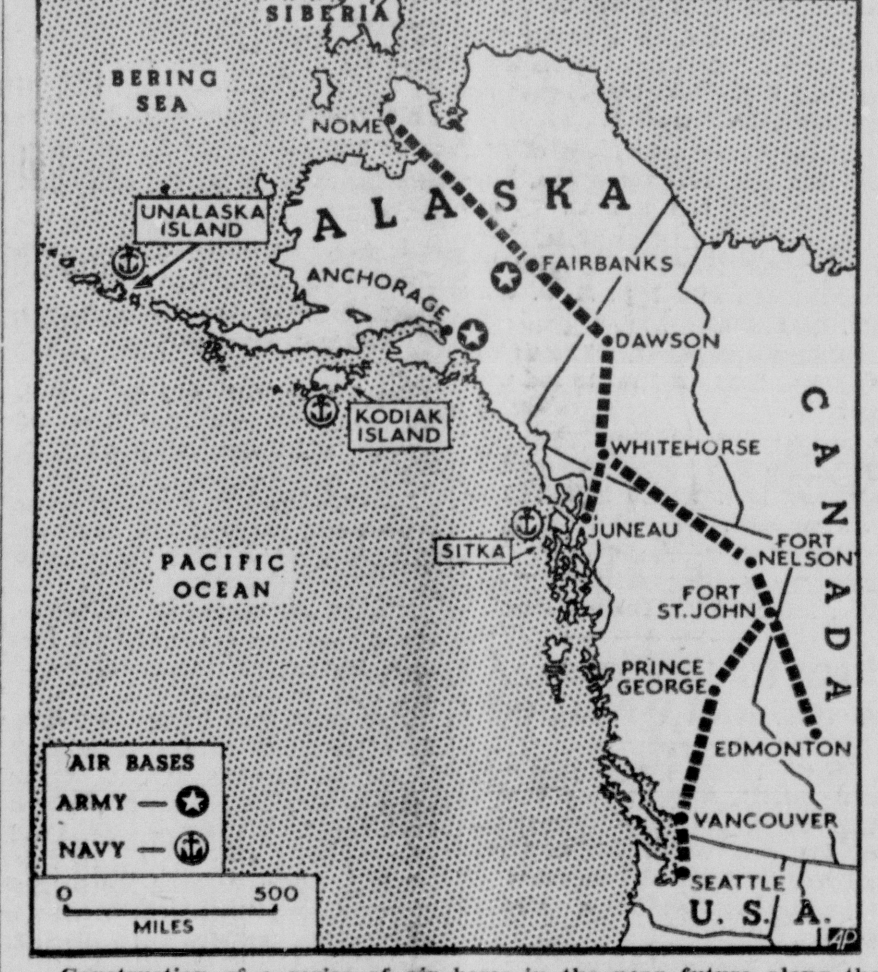

The car, owned by Lavere Hockensmith, Hanover R. 4, was considerably damaged. Scholl said the steering gear locked as he was passing another car and caused the car to upset on the east side of the road. The officer said Scholl left the scene and was not located for questioning until 7 o'clock this morning.

Air Bases to Help U.S. Defend Alaska

Construction of a series of air bases in the near future along the western Canadian air route connecting the United States and Canada was announced recently in Ottawa. These bases are to provide a safe year-round airway to Alaska for short-range U. S. Air Corps pursuit ships. A radio beam is to be installed over the route so that pursuit ships from Selfridge Field, Mich., for instance, may fly to Alaskan bases on the beam. The proposed bases, while primarily to facilitate the movement of small fighter planes, are to be large enough to accommodate bombers. This map indicates the approximate route along which the bases are to be constructed.

EXPECT BRITISH TO START DRIVE
IN ETHIOPIA

Native Rebellions Believed Helping
Plans

[By the Associated Press]
London, Jan. 13 — Belief grew among observers today that Britain may soon attempt a major drive against Italian forces in Ethiopia with the aid of native rebellions in the fascist-conquered East African empire.

Interest in a possible Ethiopian campaign as an accompaniment or sequel to the present British drive across Italian Libya increased after Prime Minister General Jan Christian Smuts of the Union of South Africa declared in a week-end speech that South Africa's 1941 role would be to "help clear Abyssinia (Ethiopia) of the enemy and not only Abyssinia, but British Somaliland."

Smuts further expressed hope that the end of this year "may see the African continent free of the enemy right up to the shores of the Mediterranean. That is the task to which South Africa has dedicated herself."

The British middle east command, in a communique issued at Cairo last week, told of an uprising of Ethiopian "patriots, encouraged by support from the Royal Air Force," compelling an Italian garrison to flee the post of Gubba, 20 miles from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan frontier.

At the same time, the fascist forces were reported to have withdrawn from another frontier post.

ATTENDANCE AT UNION SERVICES
SETS RECORD

Rev. Putman Closes
Week of Prayer
Series Here

St. James Lutheran church was nearly filled Sunday evening for the last of the union Week of Prayer service which has opened a week before and continued nightly in Gettysburg with record attendance. On Saturday evening the A.M.E. Zion church was packed with many persons standing for the services.

Preaching on "The Coming Kingdom" at the final service Sunday evening the Rev. Mr. Putman declared that there must be a realization of the coming of the Kingdom of God within each individual before it can be expected to be established in the world. "The church must ask that the coming new order must have something of the Kingdom of Christ. Christians must meet the demands for Christian service from Christian people," he said.

The Business Men's chorus of Gettysburg presented "Our Best" as a special selection.

In a sermon on "The Gospel for Today" the Rev. Seth C. Morrow on Saturday evening declared that only repentance will save the world today. The words "repent and believe" were emphasized as forming the heart of the gospel for the modern world. He spoke of the futility of seeking peace through victory on the battlefield. "No cross ever would have been necessary," he said, "if peace could be had through the use of force."

A colored men's chorus under the direction of the Rev. Howard A. Thompson, A.M.E. Zion pastor, sang two spirituals, "Hush! Hush!" and "He'll Understand and Say Well Done."

Urges Christian Discipline

Seasonal Change Removes
4 Greyhound Buses Here

A seasonal change in Greyhound bus schedules through Gettysburg, effective last Wednesday, resulted in the removal of two east- and two west-bound buses and a change in hour of arrival and departure of two others.

Two east-bound buses, which passed through here at 1:40 p. m. and 2:25 a. m. from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia and two west-bound buses from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh which left here at 12:40 and 11:40 p. m., have been discontinued. Greyhound headquarters here said buses are dropped annually after the holidays until spring when they will be restored to the schedule.

Afternoon buses to Philadelphia and Washington now leave at 2:30 o'clock instead of 2:45 o'clock.

Under the present schedule seven Greyhound buses pass through here daily headed west; four to the east, and three south.

Picket Line Clash at Saginaw Injures Seven

Saginaw, Mich., Jan. 13 (AP)—A picket line clash in which police used tear gas and seven persons were injured closed the Wilcox-Rich division plant of the Eaton Manufacturing company here today.

The disorder resulted when approximately 400 plant employees, many of them A.F.L.-United Automobile workers, attempted to pass through a picket line set up by the C.I.O.-U.A.W.

Of those injured in the melee five were police and two were identified as members of the picket line. Patrolman Milan V. Plavsky was the only one whose injuries confined him to a hospital. He suffered severe head cuts. Others were treated and released.

R.A.F. ATTACKS
NAZI TROOPS IN
COAST TRENCHES

British Also Raid
Cities in Italy, Invasion Ports

[By the Associated Press]
German troops in trenches along the Nazi-occupied French and Belgian coasts — presumably awaiting Adolf Hitler's signal to invade England — were reported today to have been machine-gunned by British warplanes in low-flying attacks, while other R.A.F. raiders bombed Nazi U-boat bases and pounded the Italian cities of Venice, Turin and Catania.

Amid reported new reverses in the war with Greece, Premier Mussolini shook up his army command for the third time in two months, dispatching his chief of staff, Gen. Ugo Cavallero, to take charge of Italy's hard-hit armies in Albania.

General Cavallero, who helped Mussolini take over the Italian military machine in 1925, was credited with having played a major role in reorganizing Italian defenses after the Caporetto disaster in the World War. He succeeds Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, who was sent to command the Albanian campaign in a shakeup November 10. Gen. Cavallero replaced Marshal Pietro Badoglio on December 6.

Authoritative London quarters said the R.A.F.'s daylight gunning attack on Nazi troops, entrenched near the beach along the channel coast, was part of a campaign to drive German defenses back from the channel.

4th Daylight Raid

It was the R.A.F.'s fourth straight daylight attack on the Germans—highlighted by Friday's spectacular machine-gunning raid on German airdromes over 1,000 square miles of northern France.

The London air ministry also reported RAF bombing attacks overnight on oil targets in Germany, Italy and Belgium, including a low-flying smash at refineries in Porto Marghera, near Venice, Italy, and Regensburg, in the Reich, and Ostend, Belgium.

"Anti-aircraft defenses first were silenced by machine-gun fire from a few hundred feet," the air ministry's communique said, describing the attack on Porto Marghera.

"Then a heavy bomb was released from a very low level and blew up one of the large refinery buildings. More bombs set oil storage tanks on fire. A second large building nearby was hit by two bombs and was seen to collapse and fall in pieces."

Hitler's Version

"Finally, sheds and workshops were machine-gunned almost from the ground level. The target was left blazing..."

Hitler's high command, briefly noting the attack on Nazi channel troops, asserted "weak forces" of British planes "attempted to penetrate German-occupied continental bases" at noon Sunday and that three RAF planes were shot down."

The German high command also reported an RAF raid early today on the Bavarian city of Bayreuth, 125 miles north of Munich, where the Wagner musical festivals are held. It is an important railway junction, as well, little damage was reported.

Fires in London

While London underwent another severe "fire raid" by the Germans, the R.A.F. attacked Nazi U-boat bases at Lorient, Le Havre and Brest, France, and blasted four German-held airdromes at Vannes, Chartres, Evreux and Morlaix with "good results observed," the air ministry said.

A British communique reported "many incendiaries" were dropped on London in an attack that lasted three and one-half hours; but hundreds of civilians pitched in to help firemen smother the fierce-burning bombs. Casualties were reported "not heavy."

On the Albanian war front, a dispatch from an Associated Press correspondent with the Greek counter-invasion armies said Greek shock troops were imperiling the Italian defense line beyond Klisura, in central Albania, and that the Greek advance was so rapid that unburied Italian dead "still litter the battlefield."

Klisura, he said, is only a cluster of blackened ruins after an incessant rain of Greek artillery fire.

Approaching Valona

Dispatches from Athens said the Greeks were sweeping forward without serious check, closing in on Valona, Italy's last big port in southern Albania.

Other Greek advances were reported on the far north front, in the Pogradet sector, with fierce hand-to-hand battles in progress and Italian supplies endangered by the capture of a large number of pack mules.

BLIND FLYING

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 11 (AP)—The next time Philip Bauguard delivers coal to the police station, he's going to take a look around before unloading Bauguard, after dumping in the coal, climbed through the window of the chute. The window closed and locked automatically—and he had to stay in a cell until a turnkey came along on regular rounds.

Child, 6, Becomes Actress Without Ever Seeing Movie

Hollywood, Jan. 13 (AP)—The fairy queen touched Cinderella with her wand.

So today six-year-old Arlene Jackson, who has never seen a movie, becomes a movie actress.

Last week Arlene was playing in a children's home while her mother worked all day at a factory. Today she has a private dressing room, a stand-in, a wardrobe mistress and a hairdresser. Most important, she has an income of $25 a day.

It all started when Director George Stevens, trying to cast a child for an orphan's part, remarked after two days of interviews:

"I'm sick and tired of affected Hollywood brats. Let's go hunting for someone new."

Where better, reasoned Stevens, could he find a child to play an orphan's role than in an orphanage? He and Martha Cheavens, author of the screenplay, set out. They visited most of the city's orphanages without success, then stopped in at the children's home.

"Do you know any recitations?" Stevens inquired as Arlene was brought in.

"I know the story of the three wise men," she replied, and for several minutes the director and the writer listened as she told it, without once hesitating.

"She's the one," Miss Cheavens said as Arlene finished. Stevens agreed.

Next morning, a limousine stopped before the home. A chauffeur and a welfare worker took Arlene to the studio for wardrobe fittings and a screen test. She came through like a veteran.

Until she met Cary Grant and Arlene Dunne, who play her parents in "Penny Serenade," she never had seen a movie star. But not a moment's nervousness did she show.

Then the "Fairy Queen" Miss Cheavens, took her to lunch. Ice cream pie topped it off.

"That was nice," Arlene told her. "I never tasted any before."

Keep Winter Menus

Colorful With Carrots

When winter menus lack color and variety, why not use carrots? They are one of the most important of the root vegetables, says Miss Mildred L. Adams, home economics extension representative, Adams county.

Carrots have a pleasing flavor and color and contain valuable food material. The orange color of carrots lends itself to color contrasts, a factor which makes a meal more tempting.

Carrots are an excellent source of carotene, a substance which is changed into vitamin A in the liver. Raw carrots contain a fairly good amount of vitamin B and G and a small amount of vitamin C. However, they are important sources of these vitamins only if eaten in large amounts, reminds Miss Adams. Carrots also furnish a good supply of calcium and a fair amount of iron.

To get the most vitamins and minerals from carrots, she advises using them raw. As a raw vegetable, carrots may be cut up into long, slender pieces and served as carrot sticks, or they may be used in salads or sandwich fillings.

If you prefer to serve cooked carrots, cook them in a small amount of boiling water with or without a cover. This method saves many of the valuable minerals and vitamins. The yellow coloring in carrots is only slightly dissolved by water and is not affected by heat.

Carrots may turn brown in cooking, especially if they are overcooked. This is because the sugar in them forms a caramel-like product. Whole carrots, depending on size, require about 12 to 40 minutes for cooking in boiling water, while diced carrots cook in 8 to 10 minutes.

Cooked carrots may be served creamed or buttered. Although buttered carrots are an old favorite, they combine well with other vegetables, such as peas, celery, cabbage and string beans. Another way to serve carrots is in soup. To make carrot soup, follow the directions for a simple cream soup and use carrots for the vegetable.

Thoughts for New Year

In January, smart homemakers:

1. Bring out extra fruit juice as insurance against colds.
2. Try out new hot bread recipes.
3. Attend a January white sale and stock up on sheets and towels.
4. Plan the household budget for the coming year.
5. Use plenty of root vegetables, especially carrots, in the daily diet.
6. Plan summer activities for home and yard improvements.
7. See that one hot food is included in the children's school lunches.
8. Resolve to reduce the number of accident hazards in the home.
9. Examine all canned products before opening and serving.
10. See that each child gets at least a quart of milk a day.

Red Cross "Mercy Ship" To Take Supplies to Greece

Washington, D. C.—An American Red Cross "mercy ship," carrying a $850,000 cargo of critically-needed relief supplies for Greek war victims, will leave New York for Athens on or about January 15, it was announced here by Chairman Norman H. Davis.

The vessel will be the S.S. Kasandra Louloudis, a 7,500-ton freighter provided free of charge by the Greek government. It will sail to Athens via Suez.

Mr. Davis said the Red Cross had taken action following a detailed report from its Athens representative, Charles L. House. His report described "critical" needs for complete hospital units and milk products for children. Orders have been placed for $100,000 worth of canned and dehydrated milk and $150,000 worth of drugs and surgical equipment. The remainder of the cargo will consist of 10 trucks, dried fruits, cereals, flour and a large quantity of blankets.

Orders also have been placed by the Red Cross for 25 U. S. Army field type ambulances, Mr. Davis said. They will be placed on the "mercy ship" if delivery is made before departure.

Announcement of the "mercy ship" brought American Red Cross relief to Greece to $1,100,000.

Fire Hazards Show

Increase in the Winter

Washington, D. C.—When the mercury goes down, frequency of fires go up.

This warning was issued by the American Red Cross accident prevention service in a statement urging householders to check homes for fire hazards, from cellar to attic.

Included in the check-up, the Red Cross stressed, should be a search for faulty heating equipment and electrical wiring and appliances. Fires which frequently break at night are a result of these causes, it was pointed out.

The Red Cross suggests that the following preventive measures be adopted to lessen the fire hazard:

Whenever the mercury tumbles to a frigid low, the householder is likely to stoke his furnace or heating stove into a miniature inferno. His heating plant, though perhaps adequate to the demands ordinarily made upon it, is placed under a severe strain. If there is a weak place in the system it will show up under such circumstances—and all too often with disastrous results.

Among the more frequent causes of home fires, due to faulty heating equipment and poor maintenance, are defective, soot-loaded chimneys and sagging, rusted smoke pipes. It is necessary to examine chimneys for cracks and holes, frequently caused by disintegrating mortar, and to make sure that flues are cleaned out every year. Flue linings are also essential to safety, and the stove pipe must not only be kept in good condition but should be insulated from the wall with non-inflammable material and equipped with a metal collar where it enters the chimney.

 Thursday: Muhlenberg at Bucknell; Ursinus at F. and M.
 Saturday: Ursinus at Albright; Lebanon Valley at Muhlenberg.

Ursinus came from behind in the final period to hand the Gettysburg college cagers their first setback of the season Saturday evening at Collegeville in a league game, 30-29.

The Bears led by a small margin for the first three periods but wilted in the final quarter.

The Bears used two complete teams as units, one using a zone defense and the other the man-for-man style. Although the switching of style was a little confusing for a time to the Bears-men it was the loss of Buyer for most of the game which was severely felt.

Buyer drew three personal fouls in the first period and Coach Bream yanked his high-scoring ace for use the next period. However, a minute after Buyer entered the game in the last quarter he drew his final foul.

Gettysburg got off to an 11-4 lead in the first period and at half time led 16-11.

The Bears cut the margin to 24-21 at the close of the third period and then took the lead early in the last round. Charley Falke and Russ Sohnleitner were forced to play careful ball in the fading minutes as each had three personal fouls. With five seconds of play remaining Falke landed a goal for the Bears to wind up the scoring.

Coach Bream's outfit outscored their opponents from the field 11-9 but lost out at the foul line.

On Wednesday afternoon the Bears played Navy at Annapolis.

GET $100, MISS $400

New Castle, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP)—One of two men brandished a gun as they appeared at the Penn theater box office and told Assistant Manager Glenn Bell: "Give us two tickets and what else you've got." The robbers took $100 in change Bell handed them and fled. Safe in the till was $400 in bills.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, Jan. 13 (AP)—Week's wash: The football Dodgers are denying Larry MacPhail has a ten per cent slice of the club. . . . They're organizing a drive to have book-making legalized when and if racing returns to New Orleans. . . . There are two open dates on this year's Boston college grid schedule and the papers up there think one of them would be a good spot in which to launch a new B. C.-Fordham series. . . . The teams haven't met since away back when the Eagles were pretty small football potatoes. . . . Cubs are the first big league team out with a 1941 player roster. . . . A beaming Jimmy Wilson is featured on the cover.

Reason and reasons—The Ohio High School Football Coaches' Association is 100 per cent behind Paul Brown for the Ohio State job. . . . For one thing, Paul is a fine fellow and a fine coach (this Massillon teams have lost only one game in the last 60). . . . For another, some of the other boys wouldn't mind winning a state championship once in a while.

Quick look-around—At last! Here's a guy who's smart enough to quit while he's on top. Eddie Leishman, who piloted Twin Falls, Idaho, and Spokane, Washington, to pennants in his first two years as a manager, is retiring. . . . What have the country boys got that the city slickers haven't when it comes to playing ball—for instance Devil's Slide (pop. 321) won the Utah sandlot championship and Minter City (pop. 350) was the Mississippi winner. . . . Virginia Lee Graham, 12, plays second base for the boys' team of a Wyoming, Illinois, grade school and is a 300 hitter. Also, she is a regular on the boys' basketball team. . . . Laff-of-the-week: Ancil Hoffman saying Max Baer won't fight Joe Louis again until Joe regains his reputation and gets hot again. Nuts.

Today's guest star—Lynn C. Doyle, Philadelphia Evening Bulletin: "Bert Bell is still shopping for a Philadelphia Eagle coach with a high-sounding name. . . . And when they get him, let him bring his football team along, too."

A few on the house—Who's got some contributions for this album of song, anyway? . . . Billy Conn flew to Florida and back twice last week just because he likes the ride. . . . A mid-western paper reports old Blues in that territory are quite philosophical about Yale's radical move in naming a non-graduate as head coach. . . . When Lou Ambers begins his campaign as a water-wrestler against Eddie Connelly at Barre, Vermont, next week, the third man in the ring will be Lou's old idol, Tony Canzoneri. . . . Paul Waner is finding the market for 38-year-old ball players a bit on the sluggish side. . . . The Cards are $350,000 richer because of Branch Rickey's high pressure sales talks in 1940.

Advertising department—While Madison Square Garden continues to seek talent for its "honest wrestling" shows, Mr. Bob Harmon, Columbia drum beater, is inviting the addicts to drop around and get warmed up for the noble experiment by watching the Lion grapplers. . . . (This ad is paid for by the "friends of honest wrestling"—all seven of them.)

Public notice—The Patrick Edward Comiskey rooting and tooting association has disbanded.

Light Heavyweight Title Bout Tonight

Cleveland, Jan. 13 (AP)—Power versus speed and stamina is the size-up of tonight's battle here for the world's light heavyweight title. . . . Ex-champion Mello Bettina, the rugged scrapper from Beacon, N. Y., and Anton Christoforidis of Greece, who reigned over all the middleweights of Europe when the fighting was still in a ring, will go 15 rounds or less.

The national Boxing association, declaring Billy Conn automatically abdicated by failing to defend his crown, has labeled the bout a title match.

Southpaw Bettina is the better puncher and, at 174 or so, will carry about a seven-pound weight advantage. He dropped the crown to Conn after only six months on the throne and has been busy slugging his way back up the ladder since.

FLU CLOSES COLLEGE

Washington, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP)—Washington and Jefferson college suspended classes today and tomorrow because of prevalence of influenza among the 550 students. Dean of Faculty E. M. Weyer said the faculty acted because of rapid spread of the disease but emphasized that the influenza was very mild in form and that condition of no student was critical. There were 72 cases reported Saturday and 106 Sunday.

AIM AT COKE RECORD

Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP)—Fayette county may have a record number of 7,000 coke ovens in operation within the next few months. Already 6,156 are in blast with prospects of at least 1,000 more being added.

BULLETS LOSE MAT DECISION TO C.C.N.Y.

"Hen" Schwartz Gains Only Fall of Meet

Coach "Pete" Beeson's Gettysburg college wrestling team lost seven bouts on decisions to the City College of New York grapplers and thereby lost their dual match Saturday evening in New York, 21-5.

Henry Schwartz, Bullet 136-pounder, was the only winner for the locals and scored the only fall of the match by pinning Applebaum in 2:45.

The entire Bullet squad put up a good battle against their more experienced rivals.

The summaries:
 121-pound, Twersky, C. C. N. Y., decision Besecker, 10-8 points.
 128-pound, Levin, C. C. N. Y., decision McGlaughlin, 10-9 points.
 136-pound, Schwartz, Gettysburg, threw Applebaum, 2:45.
 145-pound, Schlapiro, C. C. N. Y., decision Bowers, 5-0 points.
 155-pound, Ginsberg, C. C. N. Y., decision Hart, 6-2 points.
 165-pound, Sahnner, C. C. N. Y., decision Frying, 4-3 points.
 175-pound, Winitzer, C. C. N. Y., decision Romagna, 8-2 points.
 Unlimited, Gaesche, C. C. N. Y., gained referee's decision over Kaiser after a 3-3 deadlock in points.

Upsets Taks Toll in Nation's Court Ranks

New York, Jan. 13 (AP)—Upsets already have taken a fearful toll from the nation's foremost college basketball teams and the week ahead seems certain to pile the wreckage even higher.

In some cases nothing but cancellations could keep disaster from catching up with the standouts, because the hot and heavy schedule calls for undefeated teams and various league leaders to collide with each other in a grand coast to coast jumble.

As matters stand today the principal conference and independent leaders are:

EAST—Cornell and Dartmouth in the Ivy league; Villanova and Duquesne among the independents.

SOUTH—North Carolina and Richmond in the Southern conference and Florida in the south-eastern.

MIDWEST—Ohio State, Indiana and Minnesota in the Big Ten; Toledo of the independents; Nebraska and Iowa State in the Big Six; Creighton and Oklahoma A. and M. in the Missouri Valley.

SOUTHWEST—Arkansas.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS—Colorado State, Denver and Brigham Young.

PACIFIC COAST—Southern California and Stanford in the Southern division; Oregon State and Washington in the North.

There are, of course, other good teams who have been bounced into the background and may bounce back. But before they can work their way back to the top they're going to have some new companions.

Cornell and Dartmouth, both undefeated in Eastern league play, will tangle Saturday night in the highlight of four games on this week's program in the Ivy circuit. One will have to give way.

Similarly Villanova, winner of ten straight this year, will collide Wednesday with Little Seton Hall, which has won 34 in succession since last being beaten in 1939. Duquesne is on a dangerous invasion of the middle west that will be climaxed Saturday with a game against Ohio State.

Other unbeaten quints in the east include Washington and Jefferson, Baltimore and Rhode Island state. In addition Long Island, LaSalle, New York University, Georgetown and Syracuse have dropped only one.

N. Y. U. was one of the country's principal casualties last week. The Violets were plucked 47-34 Friday night by Penn State, which turned right around and lost to unpredictable Pitt Saturday night 36-27.

Clark Gable and Carole Autograph Child's Cast

Frederick, Jan. 13.—A Frederick county child is thrilled today. On a cast about her body are the autographs of Clark Gable and his wife, Carole Lombard.

The child is Agnes Valentine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Valentine, Emmitsburg, and a patient at Children's Hospital school, Baltimore. Visiting the hospital while they were in Baltimore, the Gables saw Agnes and wrote their names on her cast in response to her request. They said it was the first such autograph they had given.

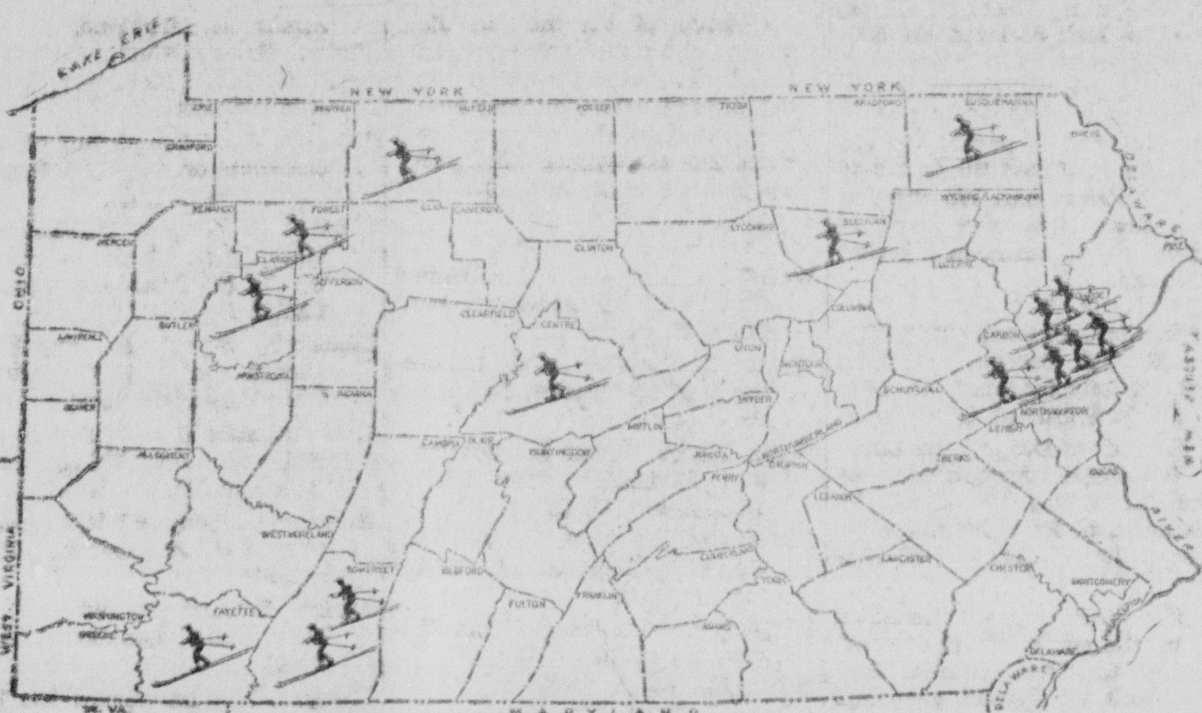

ANY ROADS THROUGH A CHICKEN FARM?

Sandefjord, Norway (AP)—The county of Vedfold has signed a contract with farmer Soeren Soeyland and Mrs. Soeyland to the effect that 250 fruit trees along a road across their farm are to be considered public property.

Passers-by may eat what fruit they can on the spot, but none may be carried off.

Total deaths in the United States for 1940 are estimated at 1,420,000.

U. S. TRYING TO AID CITIZENS STILL IN EUROPE

State Department and Red Cross Cooperating

(By the Associated Press)
 Washington, Jan. 13.—Uncle Sam is making one more effort to bring his worried and war-trapped nieces and nephews back from Europe.

The state department, assisted by the American Red Cross, is repatriating cash-shy or destitute Americans who have remained in France through the war, either by choice or circumstances beyond their control.

Most have lost their property or their jobs and find it impossible to continue to live there under German occupation of northern France, increasing unemployment, and severe food rationing.

The Red Cross has undertaken to provide railway transportation and maintenance through Spain and Portugal to Lisbon.

The state department, assisted a small emergency fund, is lending the destitute Americans money—against promissory notes—sufficient for minimum passage of steamships from Lisbon to the United States. The offer expires January 31.

Officials estimated that approximately 600 persons thus would be repatriated, including 500 from German-occupied France (mostly Paris), and 100 from unoccupied France.

The first group is en route to New York on American export line ships. Officials here estimate that, even when the 600 are repatriated, about 1,500 Americans will remain in France, mostly along the Riviera.

It was explained that they have "roots" in the country through birth, marriage, or length of residence.

Countians Enjoy Skating on Frozen Lakes and Streams

Lake Erie—Ohio River Canal Proposed Again

Hundreds of Adams countians took advantage of ice-covered streams and lakes over the week-end to indulge in their first ice skating this winter.

Skating conditions have been ideal for the last week with strong ice in most sections.

Approximately 100 persons skated on "Fifty-Fifty" Bill Zinkand's lake just east of town Sunday afternoon.

Another large group was at the brickyard pond, a short distance northwest of town.

Ideal conditions attracted a large group to the Alwine brickyard pond, near New Oxford.

The largest crowd on Sunday was reported at Laurel lake where 700 persons were counted. Streams throughout the county were well-filled with skating enthusiasts.

Although skating is permitted on the swimming pool at Piney Mountain Inn, a leak has caused the ice to sag and is unsafe. No skating is permitted at the state-operated pool at Caledonia which is said to have been drained. Skating also is prohibited at the Chambersburg dam, a short distance north of Caledonia.

Meadow Hill lake at York Springs was flooded recently and has been well-populated with skaters.

Enthusiasts of the winter sport jammed Marsh Creek Heights on Sunday where good conditions have prevailed for the last week.

Local hardware dealers have reported heavy sales in ice skates, with particularly brisk buying on Saturday.

It was necessary for Calvin Shank to go to Baltimore today to buy an additional supply of skates for the Gettysburg Hardware store, so heavy was the buying on Saturday.

Zerling's hardware store reports the sale of a goodly number of skates and being sold out of some styles.

Saturday's sales were particularly good at the Luther I. Sachs store.

Practically all stores have several types of skates on hand and are rapidly replenishing their supplies.

MANHATTAN IS AGROUND OFF FLORIDA COAST

Passengers and Crew in No Peril, Say Guardsmen

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP)—Eight-foot waves drove relentlessly early today against the luxury liner Manhattan, stuck fast broadside of the beach some 250 yards offshore at Lake Worth inlet.

Coast Guardsmen said there was no imminent peril threatening the 200 cruise passengers and 556 crew members aboard when the 24,289-ton ship went aground last night.

Rescue craft steamed for the scene to carry out floating operations at the first full tide.

Why the Manhattan struck bottom in clear, relatively calm weather, no one ashore could tell. Most south-bound vessels hug the southeast Florida coast to avoid bucking the gulf stream. The United States line ship was headed for California via the Panama canal.

Whether the boat hit an uncharted reef or wandered off course were points which remained to be cleared up.

First news of the Manhattan's plight came in a message from the master, Captain G. V. Richardson, who wirelessly about 8:30 p. m. (EST):

"S.S. Manhattan ashore off Lake Worth inlet. Requires assistance." Coast guardsmen in a small boat went alongside and were told the liner needed the help of other craft in getting free.

Those aboard small craft, which hovered in the vicinity, reported there was not excitement among the Manhattan's passengers, who left New York Friday night.

They said the waves, which tended to drive the ship farther ashore, were washing above the large American flag painted on the ship as a precaution when she was used to bring United States citizens out of the European war zone.

The brilliantly-lighted liner could be seen easily from the federal highway which skirts the beach at the point, about five miles north of here.

The Manhattan is 608 feet long and draws 33 feet.

DEER DROPPED BY SLING SHOT

Randle, Wash. (AP)—When W. C. "Walt" Gardner wants venison he gets it.

Injured in a fall from a horse, he waited until the last day of the deer season. Then, despite the fact his arm and shoulder were in an "airplane" cast holding the arm at right angles to his body, he mounted a horse, rode into the mountains and came upon a nice buck.

As the deer ran, Gardner rested the barrel of his gun over the cast and fired three times.

Examination of the dead buck disclosed that all three shots had taken effect.

The male ostrich often weighs 300 pounds.

Ohio Minister Accepts Call to Middletown

Announcement was made by the Rev. Dr. Samuel T. Nicholas, supply pastor at St. Peter's Lutheran church, Middletown, Sunday that the Rev. Dr. Paul Clouser, of Carey, Ohio, has accepted the call of the congregation to become pastor of the church. The announcement was made at the morning church service following the receipt of a letter from the Rev. Mr. Clouser to Edgar Nuskey, secretary of the church council.

Acceptance by the Rev. Mr. Clouser as pastor of St. Peter's church will fill the vacancy which followed the Rev. Dr. Robert L. Lang's resignation last November. Since then the Rev. Dr. S. T. Nicholas has been serving as supply pastor.

A former member of the Memorial Lutheran church in Harrisburg, the Rev. Dr. Clouser is a graduate of Gettysburg college and Gettysburg Lutheran seminary where he was a classmate of Doctor Lang. Since his graduation twenty-two years ago he has had two charges, and has been pastor of the Cary Lutheran church for fourteen years.

Motorists in several western states, beset by heavy winter snows, clear their driveways with old bedsprings hitched to their cars.

An Evening Thought

Since we cannot attain to greatness, let us revenge ourselves by railing at it.—Montaigne.

The Words They Used

Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein (in a New York synagogue):—"Surely, if we believe that God comes first * * * those in charge of our defense plans should make ample provisions to guarantee, wherever possible, the observances of the religious practices of the boys who are called into service. Some inconveniences will be experienced in providing food for those who have religious scruples concerning dietary laws."

Senator Bennett Champ Clark—(of Missouri):—"It is simply a bill to authorize the President to declare war so far as international affairs are concerned and to establish a totalitarian government so far as domestic affairs are concerned."

Ex-Presidential Candidate Landon—"The President in his message to Congress practically committed us to underwrite an English victory, despite his pledge to the nation in his last fireside chat that he would not send an expeditionary force to Europe."

Ex-Presidential Candidate Willkie (in an interview endorsing President Roosevelt's lend-lease plan):—"Congress must not be hurried into passage of this bill. * * * Some of these days, by that process, we will be rushed right out of our democracy."

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia (instructions to Police Commissioner Valentine on noise-abatement):—"All buses and taxi-cabs with noisy horns or motors must be kept from using the city's streets until the offending conditions are corrected. * * * believe the new multiple-tone musical horns to be violations of law."

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams

TRANQUILITY
JOHN GALSWORTHY named one of his books, containing a group of brief essays, "The Inn of Tranquility," suggested by his visit to an Italian Inn. I confess I bought the book because I liked the title—but every sketch in it is well worth reading.

Tranquility—what a wonderful state to experience! To have a tranquil mind, to look out upon life and not feel its onrushing torrents of discord, and its inner confusion—to view in tranquil mood its kaleidoscopic movements—how great an achievement!

It has been said that more people rust out than wear out. Meaning that they remain uselessly inactive, as well as neglectful of the fine opportunities afforded them to present a tranquil example of character before the world.

Kipling spoke of the chap who kept his head while those about him were losing theirs, as the one of masterful mind—a Man. Leadership always drifts to the one who is tranquil and quiet in his manner. Tranquil persons also are people of few words. Those who are disturbed and nervous are usually the talkers. They bring us little comfort.

Those places which seem to smile up at us—secluded, or hidden heavens, cast over us a spell of beauty and peacefulness difficult to explain. But, somehow or other, every element of mind and heart is bathed in tranquillity the moment we are afforded such an opportunity.

It is even possible for any of us to retire to our own Inn of Tranquility—the Inn that we hide away from the rest of the world—no matter where we may happen to be. The Inn to which we retire for peaceful talk with those who are akin to us, and who always look upon the starry heavens in wonder, and with a feeling of reverence warming the heart.

You will always meet the Inn of Tranquility on your way to happiness!

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "What You Think."

IF

The "ifs" of life are Oh so many!

As: "What if we had never met?"

Or, "Had the dollar been a penny?"

Or, "Jane had chanced to be Annette?"

"If we had turned to right instead of

Left as we were moved to go,

Still would we be this loss in dread of?"

But those are facts we'll never know.

If! If! from day to day we cry it,

"If that had been instead of this!"

Does chance permit it or deny it?

Or is life merely hit and miss?

When small disasters bowl us under,

What was the right we clearly see,

But after all sometimes I wonder

If perfect we were meant to be.

Do You Know?

The first cook stove in America was made at Hereford Furnace, in Berks county which was operated by Thomas Mabury from 1734 to 1768.

The Susquehanna river has been referred to as "liquid history," a term originally given to the English Thames by a member of Parliament.

DRAWBRIDGE ON DRY LAND
Sacramento, Calif. (AP)—Nick Schwall receives $50 a month as a bridge-tender on a bridge he does not operate.

The war department designated the Feather river as a navigable stream, despite the fact the stream has become too shallow for anything except small power boats. Not only that, the river channel has shifted until the drawbridge now is over dry land.

'Dignity' of Courts

Harrisburg Paper

Commends Judge W.

C. Sheely for Decision

The sentencing of two Dauphin county coal miners to jail for contempt of court recently by Judge W. C. Sheely, of Gettysburg, attracted favorable editorial comment last Thursday morning in "The Patriot," Harrisburg newspaper. Judge Sheely's action is described as an "outstanding one" which emphasizes the "dignity of the courts and the vitality of the law."

The Adams county jurist passed sentence on the pair while presiding specially in Dauphin county court recently.

The editorial follows: "Judge Sheely, Adams county, sitting in Dauphin courts, has sent to jail two Upper End coal miners for contempt of court. This case has more significance than the usual run of contempt sentences because of the threat of coal bootlegging which is alleged to run through it. Two other miners were to be cited similarly."

"Two of the men are accused of digging coal from private property after the court ordered them to desist. Defiance of a court order is not defiance of a judge only but of the government itself. Stealing coal is not merely depriving another of his possessions but of breaking the law enacted by all the people."

"These facts have been ignored so consistently since the era of coal bootlegging started that some persons had the impression that nothing could be done about it, that courts like other public officials lacked the courage and integrity to enforce the law and establish the sovereignty of government."

"It is that view which makes Judge Sheely's action an outstanding one. His sentence emphasizes the dignity of the courts and the vitality of the law as well as serves warning to the public that so far as his court is concerned, law and order will prevail."

Dispute over the reported introduction of a bill into the Maryland legislature revamping the police regulations seems to meet with discord in Frederick circles. Some are of the belief that the city will ignore the measure unless it conforms with the regulations now in effect. Others feel that the old Winebrener measure, placing the police under a merit system, which failed of passage in Maryland several years ago, will be revived and introduced under a new title.

BRITAIN MAY BE ASKED TO PUT UP TWO BILLION $

As Collateral — Has Big Stock Holdings in the U.S.

Washington, Jan. 13 (AP)—Highly-placed Federal officials said Saturday that the British government might be asked to put up about $2,000,000,000 of British assets in the United States as collateral for war materials President Roosevelt has proposed to "lend" to Britain.

These authorities, who declined to be quoted by name, reported that the plan was being considered "earnestly" to supplement a proposal by large New York investment trusts to purchase approximately $600,000,000 of British investments in this country. One said this phase of the deal might "come to a head in a few days."

Own American Stocks

The investment trusts were reported to be interested chiefly in buying British-owned stocks and bonds of American corporations.

Whatever is left, if this deal goes through, will be American real estate and British-owned companies or subsidiaries operating here. These represent the largest proportion of British holdings in this country and are understood to exceed $2,000,000,000 in value. According to the plan under consideration, these would be placed in escrow with a government corporation, as collateral for the war materials.

The officials indicated that this procedure had at least tentative approval in administration quarters and did not conflict with President Roosevelt's recent statement that it would be silly to measure British aid in terms of dollars.

Told to "Dig Into Barrel" The President was reported to have told various persons that the British should dig into their barrel of financial assets in order to justify the material loans he proposed. He was described as believing that it would be unfair for the British to own billions of wealth in this country yet plead inability to pay for war materials.

It was also said, however, that he took the view that some program for lending materials was necessary, first because available assets would not pay for all needs, and second because many of the assets would be difficult to convert into cash as speedily as would be necessary.

Bennett Sees Boost In Conservation Areas

The United States enters 1941 better equipped than ever before to solve one of its major agricultural problems — conservation of the soil — H. H. Bennett, Chief of the Soil Conservation Service, United States Department of Agriculture declared today.

With the formation of 435 local soil conservation districts by farmers in 38 states, he said, social machinery of a kind that has long been needed for permanent protection of the national soil resource is rapidly taking form.

"About 1,600,000 farm families now live inside the boundaries of soil conservation districts covering some 271,000 acres of land," Bennett said. "That means that about one-fourth of the farm families of the country have a local community mechanism of their own creation through which to attack the problem of land waste. Yet it has been only 40 months since Arkansas passed the first state law enabling farmers to organize and operate soil conservation districts as legal subdivisions of the state."

At the present rate of formation more than 600 soil conservation districts will have been established by 1942, he said, extending the opportunity for community action to more than 400 million acres.

"The work of protecting the productive capacity of our lands," Bennett states "can be handled best by farmers if they are given a reasonable amount of help. The soil conservation district gives them an opportunity to take this essential job in their own hands in a way they have never been able to before."

The rapid growth of soil conservation districts, according to Bennett, has been accompanied by the development of soil-saving farming methods practical enough for any farmer to use without difficulty. Such measures as contour cultivation, strip-cropping in rotation, terracing, and pasture furrowing, he said, have been tested and perfected during the last seven years through intensified research and actual use in demonstration work with farmers on the land. "Now that soil conservation districts are helping farmers put them into use over large areas, these and other conservation farming measures seem certain to spread rapidly across the farms and rangeland of the country," Bennett said. "With soil erosion still taking some 500,000 acres out of productive use a year, the importance of this increasing farmer emphasis on conservation is evident."

Mussolini Changes Commanders in Albania

Rome, Jan. 13 (AP)—Premier Mussolini sent his chief of staff, Gen. Ugo Cavallero, to take command of Italian forces under Greek attack in Albania today in the third army shake-up in two months.

Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, who took command on the Albanian front November 10, soon after the Italian invasion of Greece was turned back, was relieved at his own request because of ill health, an official announcement said.

Gen. Cavallero retains his position as chief of staff, in which he succeeded Marshal Pietro Badoglio December 6. Badoglio also resigned "at his own request."

The official announcement said: "Gen. Ubaldo Soddu, commander of Italian troops stationed in Albania, has been relieved because of his health and replaced by Chief of Staff Gen. Ugo Cavallero."

TRUCK DRIVER HELD IN DEATH OF PASTOR'S SON

Victim Found Beside His Car Near Ephrata

Ephrata, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP)—A 23-year-old truck driver was held today in connection with the hammer slaying of a clergyman's son during a quarrel over a girl.

The battered body of the victim, Robert R. Hackman, 19, was found beside his burned automobile on a lonely mountain road near here yesterday and several hours later State Police Sergeant E. R. Rubincam announced the truck driver had admitted the killing and would be formally charged with murder today.

Hackman's father, Charles M. Hackman, is pastor of a religious sect similar to the Amish. The Hackman's live on a farm at Lincoln, a small farming community near here.

Acquaintance of Victim

Sergeant Rubincam said the man arrested was an acquaintance of Hackman's and had signed a statement in which he admitted forcing Hackman to drive to an isolated state game preserve early yesterday and then beating him over the head with the victim's hammer.

Rubincam said Hackman had been keeping company with a girl with whom his attacker had been friendly up to four months ago. He quoted the prisoner as saying he had planned to give the youth a "good beating."

This is the version Rubincam gave of the slaying:

Arriving at the game preserve, Hackman attempted to push the other man from his car and drive away, but was thwarted when his attacker jumped to the running board and smashed the window.

At this point Hackman's car struck a stump, throwing the other man to the ground and starting a fire inside the auto. Armed with a hammer, Hackman climbed out of the car. His companion, however, wrested the hammer from him and beat him until he fell to the ground unconscious.

Waited at Intersection

The prisoner later drove the burning car to a clearing several hundred yards distant, carried Hackman to a spot next to the car and then walked home. Police found the hammer several yards away from the machine.

The assailant had waited at an intersection he knew Hackman would pass and climbed into his automobile when the youth halted for a highway stop sign. When Hackman's body was found parts of his clothing had been burned.

FARMERS SHOW INTEREST IN PREPAREDNESS

Secretary Expects Display, Jan. 20-24, to Set Record

Harrisburg, Jan. 13 (AP)—The state Department of Agriculture found evidence today that farmers of Pennsylvania are making the most of their opportunity to participate in the nation's preparedness drive.

"Instead of the present abnormal conditions throughout the world proving a distracting influence there is evidence of a vastly increased interest in advanced methods of agriculture on the part of the farmer," said Secretary John H. Light.

Light summarized the Pennsylvania farmer's view of national defense program as he looked forward to the State Farm Show January 20 through 24 to set new attendance records as well as a new top for the number of exhibits.

The secretary said 1,312 head of livestock and 4,069 birds in the poultry department have been listed for exhibition. Bedding for the livestock will require 350 bales of shavings, 40 bales each of peat moss and dry poultry litter and 60 tons of straw.

The farm show, Light said, will demonstrate the progress the Pennsylvania farmer has made in a year and meetings of farm organizations during show week will give a big share of their program to national plans in which farmers may participate.

James Joyce, Irish Author, Dies at 58

Zurich, Switzerland, Jan. 13 (AP)—James Joyce, Irish author whose novel "Ulysses" touched off worldwide literary controversy and influenced a new school of writing, died early today in a Zurich hospital where he had undergone an intestinal operation.

He would have been 59 years old February 2.

He was operated upon Saturday and his son said he appeared to be out of danger, seemed cheerful and was looking ahead to completing some unfinished writings. Sunday evening he suffered a relapse. His wife and son were at his bedside when he died at 1:15 a. m.

Joyce was a gaunt, studious youth, and in his face, according to a contemporary, was a sad quality "suggesting Dante."

He studied medicine, music and languages.

He chose writing for his career, however, started early, and veered into experimentation with words and technique which were to come to a climax in his "Ulysses." It took seven years to write and contained many strange words invented by the author. It influenced many writers to adopt the stream-of-consciousness method.

Aid to Children by U.S. Cuts Relief Load

Harrisburg, Jan. 13 (AP)—The transfer of 6,008 persons from direct relief rolls to the federally-aided classification known as "aid to the dependent children" caused Pennsylvania's assistance load to drop after January 1 for the first time in a month.

The direct relief rolls, financed entirely by the state, were reduced by 306 cases to a total of 137,630 during the week ended January 4.

"Under the law and state federal regulations, children are eligible for aid to dependent children if they are in need of public assistance and have been deprived of support by reason of the death, desertion, continued absence or mental or physical incapacity of the parent," said the public assistance department report.

"The favorable effect of the transfers was partially offset by unfavorable balances associated with other major factors affecting general assistance rolls. Cases added to the rolls because of past losses in private employment outnumbered cases removed because of current employment gains by a margin of 208 cases (328 persons)."

The weekly expenditures totaled $874,051, of which $50,982 went for milk.

Retailers Want F.D.R., States to Fix Holiday

Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP)—The Pennsylvania Retailers' association plans to ask President Roosevelt to "get together" with the 48 governors on a uniform date for the national observance of Thanksgiving.

In a statewide poll announced yesterday, 90 per cent of the association's members voted for a single uniform date and 51 per cent expressed a preference for the early date observed nationally the past two years.

Thirty-seven per cent of the membership voted in favor of the traditional "late" Thanksgiving which Pennsylvania observed last year. The remainder failed to state a preference.

New Type Highway Traffic Route Signs To Be Erected

Harrisburg—The Department of Highways has announced the adoption of a revised type of traffic route marking standards in its aim to facilitate driving in Pennsylvania.

These new standards have been placed in effect and the changes to make existing markers comply with the new standards will be made during the winter months. It is expected that the entire system will be revised by July.

Advance Warning

Several new types of markings have been adopted which will aid motorists in finding their way through the Commonwealth. One of these aids is an increase in the number of signs given a motorist at a point where a traffic route turns.

The new standards will provide an advance warning sign at some distance before the turning point in the route, which will consist of a standard "route marker" and a letter "R" or "L" immediately below the mark to designate whether the route turns to the right or to the left. At the intersection where the route makes the actual turn, there will be another sign which will include the route marker proper and a right arrow, or a left arrow to indicate that the route turns to the right or to the left. Immediately around the corner, either to the right or left as the case may be, on the right side of the intersection will be an additional confirmatory marker on the road into which the main route has turned.

Advance warning notices of turns in United States routes will include an "R" or "L" on a small "shield" immediately below the United States route marker. Similar, advance warning notices for Pennsylvania routes will include an "R" or "L" on a small "Keystone" immediately below the Pennsylvania route marker.

Junction Signs

At junction points where additional routes intersect, a special sign has been designed to indicate that the route intersected may proceed straight ahead and to the right, or may proceed straight ahead and to the left. In such cases, the junction information sign will be supplemented by a combination arrow pointing vertical and to the right, or vertical and to the left as the case may require.

Markers will all be installed in a consistent manner, with the lowest numbered United States route marker on top, followed by other United States route markers in numerical sequence. These will then be followed by the Pennsylvania markers in the same order.

Signs at Intervals

In built-up areas route markers will be placed every other block where practicable, and in rural areas where there are no intersecting hard surfaced roads they will be placed at intervals of not greater than five miles. In any event, the necessary confirmatory marker will always be placed on the far right side of an intersection.

Certain conditions may require the use of specially designed markers of a larger size than standard, and it may be necessary to reflectorize these units. Special consideration will be given to these unusual cases, and larger signs will be designated to meet these unusual conditions as they arise in the field.

Department officials believe that with the adoption of this new system of marking, an understandable standardization will have been effected and that the traveling public will be greatly benefited by the installation of these additional route markings. This program will not only result in a greater convenience to the public, but also will increase the safety of driving on Pennsylvania highways.

Magic Spring

YESTERDAY: A good many things have complicated what seems to David Wiley a pretty simple proposition—he loves Polly and Polly loves him, and they should marry. But Polly just has lost her job, and David has his young cousin, Peter, on his hands, and Margo Powers, daughter of David's boss, is back in town showering glamour over all the place. So Polly says the wedding must be postponed indefinitely.

Chapter 11 PETER FALLS

"Of course not! What a silly thing to ask!"

"Well, darned if I get it?" said David.

"It's simple as falling off a log," said Polly. "All I'm doing is postponing our marriage indefinitely. Things just aren't like I want them when I marry you."

"Then you aren't giving me the gate-permanently?"

"I'm not really giving you the gate at all, David," said Polly. "We'll go on seeing each other—working together out at the Inn—all that sort of thing; but we're not to use up a lot of time talking marriage."

"Okay," said David. "I know you well enough to know there's no need trying to change your mind. But listen to this, Polly—you are going to be my wife some day, and that's that!"

"All right, David, if it's any comfort to you to go on thinking that, there's nothing I can do about it."

David got up.

"You can't look me straight in the eye and say you don't love me—or can you?"

"No, David, I can't."

"Well, that's something!" said David. He suddenly caught Polly to him. "Be as foolish as you want to about our marriage," he said. "But I love you—I love you—I love you."

POLLY watched him disappear into the shadows of the tree-trunked street. A film of tears came to her eyes. She told herself that she had done the right thing. David ought to be free to marry someone who could be a great help to him; someone like Margo Powers, for instance. It wasn't right for a girl who was as poor as a church mouse to hold on to a man like a leech. Maybe she was getting her metaphors slightly mixed, but what of it? She felt that what she was doing was best for all concerned, and especially for David. So that was that.

She got up and went into the house.

"That you, Polly?" Aunt Susan called from her bedroom.

"Yes, Aunt Susan—Anything wrong?"

"My stomach's hurting me again," said Aunt Susan. "Would you fill the hot water bottle and bring it to me?"

"Yes, Aunt Susan," said Polly. And as she put the kettle on, she found herself thinking of all the hot water bottles she had filled. It was horrible—horrible—horrible. Hot water bottles for this aunt and that aunt, for this uncle and that uncle. She had probably put enough water in hot water bottles to fill that swimming pool out at Freddy's Polly.

Life for her was just one hot water bottle after another—On and on—Endlessly—

There were many things in the Wiley cottage on Elm Street that fascinated young Peter Wiley; such things as the iridescent glassware in the dining room, and the pictures on the walls of birds hanging by their pathetic little feet, and flat fishes with bright fins and dead eyes, and the many, many books, including a complete set of J. Fenimore Cooper's works, and a highly-illustrated copy of Dante's "Inferno." But the object that he especially admired was the large painting of a long dead Wiley that hung high over the mantel in the parlor.

"He's a Great-great-great Something-or-Other of yours," David had told him. "He did heroic things during the Revolutionary War, and helped establish the Wiley family here in the South."

"Gee!" Peter had said. "He looks swell on that horse—and with a sword, too!" Then, after a thought, he said: "I wonder if I'll ever be able to ride a horse."

He was wondering that now, as he stood in the parlor gazing up at the painting. He studied the crimson-clad right leg of his ancestor that leg that looked so strong and well-shaped, and then glanced down at his own right leg. He touched the iron brace that reached from ankle to thigh, and shook his head slowly.

"No," he told himself. "I guess a fellow with this on couldn't even get up onto a horse, much less ride him."

Then he suddenly made a decision. He reached down and began to unfasten the straps and buckles of the brace. He was there in the house all by himself, and it was a good time to try walking unaided. He had been told not to walk without the brace, but if he was ever to learn to do without it, he had to start practicing. Cousin David wasn't due home from the lumber plant for a while yet, and there was no one to stop him from doing what he felt he should do. Just think how swell it would be, if he could start practicing in secret, and later surprise Cousin David by walking without the brace!

He unfastened the last buckle, the last strap. He leaned against an old hair-cloth-covered rocker while he slipped out of the contraption of iron and leather. Then, when he was free of it, he straightened up, drew himself to his full height. He slowly let his weight down upon the shrunken limb—carefully, cautiously glancing now and then at the man on the horse.

One step forward—and such a feeble little step; two steps, three. And then it happened. He toppled over into a heap upon the rough surface of the faded carpet. And there he lay, a crumpled small form, sobbing—sobbing—

It was thus that David found him when he came in a few minutes later.

"Peter!" he called. He ran forward, sank to the floor and gathered the small boy in his arms. "Peter, don't cry like that! You mustn't!"

Peter looked up, his eyes swimming in tears. With difficulty he got hold of himself.

"I—I wanted to practice walking without—that thing," he said brokenly, glancing toward the iron brace. "I—I wanted to get so I could ride like my Great-great-great-Something-or-Other."

"Listen, Peter," he said finally. "It takes time to learn to do without that brace. Don't try to rush it. You'll be—well, like other boys one of these days. Don't let it worry you. You're David's boy, just as you are."

"Gee, Cousin David," Peter said, brushing the back of his hand across his eyes. "I sure don't know what I'd do without you."

"Forget it!" David said brusquely. He got up, and helped the boy over to a chair. "Now," he said, "I've got some good news for you. Mr. Sewell's given us a lot of pipe to fix the swimming pool."

Peter's eyes widened. "You—you mean we can fix it so we can take swims?" he asked.

"Yes," said David. "The lawyer tore down an old house he owned, and he told me I could have the plumbing fixtures. There's a lot of pipe we can use to replace the rusty one out at the Inn. Before you can say Jack Robinson, we'll be diving into that pool and having us a world of fun."

"Gee!" It was all Peter could say. He began putting the brace back on. David helped him.

"Now," said David, "let's go fix ourselves some supper. I've got to put on my white pants and dark coat—and keep a date."

"Oh, boy," said Peter. "I bet you look swell all dressed up. Just like a picture in a magazine!" He followed David out to the kitchen. "I'll bet Polly'll be tickled when she sees you."

"This date's not with Polly," said David. "I'm going out with Margo Powers."

"Oh!" said Peter. "But—I—I thought Polly was your girl?"

"She is. But this evening I'm going out dancing with Margo. Polly understands. She doesn't mind."

Peter hurried into setting the kitchen table for two, since they very seldom ate in the dining room. "You're not going to change your mind, and marry Miss Powers, are you, Cousin David?" he asked.

"Of course not!" he said. And then: "Would you prefer me to marry Polly?"

"Sure," said Peter. "If—if you must marry anybody."

"You like Polly better, now you've got to know her—don't you?"

"Yes," said Peter. "She's not bad. She treats me like I was grown, and not just a kid. We have lots of fun working out at the Inn. We worked out there this afternoon, and got two flower beds all weeded. They're full of violets and funny-looking bulb-things."

"Good," said David. "We'll all three go out there Saturday afternoon. I'll have a look at what you and Polly have done, and start fixing the pipes for the pool."

Peter looked up from setting the table.

"Even if I can't ever learn to ride a horse," he said. "I guess I can learn to swim. Can't I, Cousin David?"

"Of course you can," David said. "Lots of folks like me." Peter went on, "can swim well with their arms—even if they don't have good legs."

"Your legs are going to be all right," David said, placing several slices of bacon in an iron frying pan. "But swimming mostly with your arms will develop them—and your shoulders, too. You'll grow up to be one of those athletic-looking men, with narrow hips, and great wide shoulders. A football player; that's what you'll be, Peter!"

"Gee!" said Peter. "Then maybe I can have a horse, and—and—ride in parades?"

"Parades?" said David. "Why parades?"

"Cause I can wear a sword like my Great-great-great-Something-or-Other," said Peter. "Gee, I'd like to see myself sitting on a horse with a sword strapped to my side!"

"You will," said David. "Then he gave all his attention to preparing the evening meal."

Going dancing with Margo Powers—Ardendale's glamour girl and Ardendale's stay-at-home going places together—Margo had driven out to the plant, and then afternoon—like other boys.

David couldn't think of anything to say for a moment.

"All he could do was to hold the boy close to him."

"Listen, Peter," he said finally. "It takes time to learn to do without that brace. Don't try to rush it. You'll be—well, like other boys one of these days. Don't let it worry you. You're David's boy, just as you are."

"Gee, Cousin David," Peter said, brushing the back of his hand across his eyes. "I sure don't know what I'd do without you."

Peter's eyes widened. "You—you mean we can fix it so we can take swims?" he asked.

"Yes," said David. "The lawyer tore down an old house he owned, and he told me I could have the plumbing fixtures. There's a lot of pipe we can use to replace the rusty one out at the Inn. Before you author's serious attempt to understand himself, because of his ability to make notable phrases, and because he has a gift of style. Its crudities are its chief faults.

The greatest of these is hitched directly to the plan of the book. Monsarrat wants to show the maturing of a young English mind; he does not neglect to provide a basis of action for the changes, but he does write dissertation after dissertation on politics, philosophy and heaven knows what else, nearly all of which could be omitted, and it must be confessed nearly all of which have a certain interest. This is because he writes extremely well.

The second crudity has to do with his presentation of his hero's sex urge. Marcus Hendrycks starts his career at Cambridge as a typical young waster. His father dies, leaving him broke, and by gradual stages Marcus drops through the strata of London society until he lives with an odd assortment of people and bedbugs in a London slum. At this point he goes communist. Inevitably he goes also to Spain, is invalidated home, and at the absolute bottom of everything meets the right girl and goes forth to live with her.

And all this time young Marcus is sex-ridden. He is normal, although extra-curricular activities along the sex line seem to interest him. There is a good deal of intimate description, nearly all of which sounds as if it had been plotted with a T-square and written out of Hemingway scraps. Some of it is, therefore, quite beautiful, and some rather dull. It is nearly all unconvincing but not in an unpleasant sense. It is rather like a charming boy trying to describe something that continually eludes him.

Young Marcus ends by retaining the good of his communism and yielding to a form of utopianism, a country community in which an attempt at self-sufficiency will be made, though not by living in a hand-woven smock in the woods. The answer is postponed by the present war, however. Partly because its confusion is, after all, expressive, partly because of the gift of the author, this is a good book to read.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13 (AP)—An 18-year-old youth who police said sought to end his life by shooting himself in the head with a .33 calibre pistol was alive today because the bullets in the gun were made of wood instead of lead. The pellet shattered after slightly wounding the youth. Police said the gun belonged to a friend of the young man who kept it in the house to frighten burglars.

What could a man do after that but give in? Nothing, David decided. So he said, "Okay, I'll be ready. He now put the foot on the table, and he and Peter sat down to eat."

MacKenzie Says: Invasion Is Near

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

Developments over the week-end tend to support the assertion of British Minister of Economic Warfare Dalton that the war will reach a climax in the "next few months, perhaps in the next few weeks"—a point which this column has been emphasizing for some time now.

Herr Hitler's projected invasion of England undoubtedly has been the subject of the destructive argument between Nazi and British bombers. The nature of the objectives upon which they have been unloading their freight of hate lend substance to that view.

For Hitler the operations represent the necessary preparation for the actual attempt to land troops. For the British it is a question of stopping the invasion before it starts, by destroying transports and supplies accumulated for the assault.

Hitler Seeks Opening

That the German dictator should be looking for an opening at this unfavorable time of year is indication of the urgency of the matter from his standpoint. Flying conditions are bad and the English channel is a race-way of peril for the transportation of hundreds of thousands of sea-sick troops and their mountainous equipment and supplies.

The fuhrer is spurred to take extreme chances by the determination of the United States administration to go all-out in aid for Britain. He is rushing against time in an effort to crush England before American help and her own resources give her sufficient strength to stand up against the might of the German war machine.

He will be lucky if fortune gives him a maximum of six months. Every day now is a golden one, for the turn of war probably isn't far away from that.

He must strike quickly and surely before the combined Anglo-American resources descend on him.

Berlin's Strategy

Hitler's preliminary strategy must provide for the weakening of the defensive system which the British have constructed to ward off invasion. His weapon for that is his air force, since he is very weak in naval power. With his air-fleet he must, so to speak blast holes in the British ramparts to make way for his landing forces.

For the last two nights the Germans have been pouring bombs into London again. The point of that is two-fold: It is a continuation of the effort to break civilian morale;

WANT TO SAVE JOBS OF 12,000 SEWING WOMEN

Disputes Between James and WPA To Be Ironed Out

(By the Associated Press)
Harrisburg, Jan. 13.—The dispute between Governor James and Col. Philip Mathews, state W.P.A. administrator, over the threatened halt of sewing projects on January 27, may flare up on the floor when the house meets tonight.

A five-man committee, headed by Rep. William A. Shaw, (D-Allentown), was named last week to investigate a settlement of the sewing project controversy in a move to save the jobs of 12,000 needy women.

A threatened march on the capitol by some of the women workers was averted by the committee's entrance into the picture, Shaw said. Shaw and his group will confer with federal W.P.A. authorities later in the week.

Mathews, announcing that the projects were on an extension of time now and would be ended January 27 unless the legislature acted, accused the state administration of failing to provide the required 25 per cent sponsor's share—about $10 per month per worker.

James retorted that Pennsylvania was contributing more than 25 per cent toward W.P.A. projects over-all, and appealed to Washington to continue the sewing jobs.

Both republicans and democrats in the house expressed themselves in favor of the investigation.

Solution Will Be Sought
"We want to find a solution both the governor and W.P.A. can accept," Shaw said in Philadelphia after visiting one of the largest sewing projects. "We are not trying to fix the blame on anyone. We are not investigating this on a partisan basis—we simply want to save the women's jobs."

W. Va. Senate Fight Overshadows Inaugural

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 13 (AP)—Swift-paced political maneuvering by rival democratic factions, with a U. S. Senate appointment at stake, virtually overshadowed today's inauguration ceremonies for West Virginia's new governor, Matthew Mansfield Neely.

Inauguration of former Senator Neely, was in itself merely an anticlimax to the moves that took place last night and early today as the democrats jockeyed over the appointment of Neely's successor.

The result was that Neely, not waiting for formal inauguration, was sworn in as governor at midnight and immediately announced a senate appointment. At the same time, retiring Governor Homer A. Holt announced the name of his appointee for the same job for the third time in three days.

Neely's first act was to designate Dr. Joseph Rosier, president of Fairmount State Teachers' college and former president of the national Educational association, as his choice to serve out the two years remaining of Neely's term.

Holt, in three official proclamations, has designated Clarence E. Martin, of Martinsburg, former president of the American Bar association, as his senate appointee.

The Neely-Holt struggle over the senate appointment capped a political feud of long standing. They were at odds throughout Holt's administration, and in the May primary, when Neely was nominated, his so-called "federal" faction defeated Holt's "statehouse" group.

Neely and Holt each contends he has the right to make the appointment. Political observers were inclined to the belief that the senate itself finally would settle the issue.

2 TRUCKERS ARRESTED
Two Baltimore truck drivers were arrested over the week-end by state motor policemen for driving overloaded trucks and were fined $23 and the costs by Justice of the Peace Gerald Orndorff, Oxford township. The defendants were Charles Reed and Charles E. Bond.

R-a-d-i-o Programs

New York, Jan. 13 (AP)—For the fourth time, British war refugee children in this country and Canada will talk to their families back in England by means of a trans-Atlantic two-way hookup for a half hour beginning at 10:30 a. m. next Sunday. The broadcast will be relayed on this side by WJZ, NBC and in England by BBC.

The latest available station score in the radio music fee row shows Broadcast Music Inc. with 683 stations of all classifications and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers with 201. Some have been signed by both organizations.

The short wave forecast for the week indicates that for the first half reception should be good but that for the second half there will be a decrease to fair.

U. S. Freighter in Distress in Atlantic

New York, Jan. 13 (AP)—Lashed by heavy seas, the American freighter West Kebar reported she was in distress and taking in water early today some 600 miles east of Baltimore, near the regular New York-to-Bermuda route.

A half hour after the West Kebar wireless that she was listing heavily to port the American steamer Cocollada messaged she could reach the West Kebar "within one hour and a half or two hours."

Two coast guard cutters, the Galatea and the Champlain, were sent from New York to aid the listing ship, owned by the American West African line.

SHE TRAVELS, TOO—Storms she and fellow passengers aboard the Portuguese liner, Carvalho Araujo, encountered in the Atlantic are forgotten as Dinah Kauders, 2, little Czech girl, reaches U.S. She's going to visit friends in Boston.

GREEK DRIVE IS UNCHECKED BY ITALIANS

Offensive Initiated After Fall of Klisura

By DANIEL DELUCE
(By the Associated Press)
With the Greek advance forces in Albania, Jan. 12 (Delayed)—Hammer blows by Greek shock troops against a temporary Italian defense line beyond Klisura imperilled Italian forces in this area today.

What may prove the biggest Greek offensive of the war in Albania, initiated with the occupation of Klisura two days ago, swept onward without a serious check. Klisura, key point in the Italian salient during weeks of stubborn resistance, is only a cluster of blackened ruins.

The retreating Italians are losing more men as prisoners every hour. Extraordinarily accurate Greek artillery fire gives them no respite.

On this drive, the Greeks are pinning their hope of chasing the Italians from half of Albania. Greek infantrymen thrown into the first lines are the best, armed with automatic rifles and machine-guns. Their artillery batteries are keeping pace and, above this valley, cannonading goes on unceasingly.

No Italian Planes Out
No Italian planes ventured today to strafe the advancing Greeks. A strong detachment of Greek fighter aircraft is close at hand to protect the ground forces.

Behind the front are 600 seized Italian motor trucks ready for transport back to Greece.

Greek progress was so swift that unbattered Italian dead still litter the battlefield.

Homeless villagers are camping in the trenches which the Italians once held. A grandmother and two small children are huddled in a muddy embankment with only a blanket full of belongings, their only food that which Greek soldiers gave them from their own rations.

Strategic Crossroads
At Klisura, a portrait of the Italian king and Premier Mussolini still looked out from the facade of the former Italian Fascist party headquarters upon the blackened shells of bombed houses, some of whose walls were still standing.

Klisura is at a strategic crossroad. To the left, the deep canyon of Apos leads to a snow-covered mountain range and Tepeleni. To the right, mountains level down to shrub-covered hills and broad plains in the direction of Berat.

Driven out of naturally formidable positions by persistent Greek attacks, the Italians now have a terrain much less favorable for defense.

The Greeks permitted Italian prisoners to dry out their uniforms over camp boilers, for it was raining almost continuously. Eight inches of snow in the valley two weeks ago have now become six inches of mud. Despite the mud and wretched bridges, however, Greek supplies are arriving in large volume for a continued push.

Approaching Valona

Athens, Jan. 13 (AP)—Greek warriors closing in on Valona, the Italians' only remaining port on entry into southern Albania, were reported sweeping forward without serious check today in what Greeks called the greatest offensive of the war.

The spearhead of the Greek drive was declared to have reached the vicinity of Tepeleni, ancient fortress town 10 miles southwest of captured Klisura, and its fall was expected momentarily by authorities here.

There even were reports from the Yugoslav frontier that Tepeleni, guardian sentinel of an Italian-built road leading to Valona, already had been captured, but this lacked official confirmation in Athens.

Further Greek advances were reported on the northern sector of the Albanian battlefield in the Pogradetz sector, with fierce hand-to-hand engagements in progress.

House Near Gardners Is Destroyed by Flames

Only a few pieces of kitchen furniture were saved Saturday afternoon when fire destroyed the farm house of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Aaron Marsh, near Gardners. The blaze, fought several hours by firemen of Mt. Holly Springs and Carlisle, was caused by an overheated chimney.

Mrs. Marsh discovered the fire shortly after the pair had finished the noon-day meal. Members of the Citizens Fire company, Mt. Holly Springs responded with two apparatus, and the firemen had virtually halted the flames when the fire on the farm, from which the firemen were pumping, went dry.

At the time the sparks were flying towards a nearby haystack and large barn. While one truck went to near Mt. Holly Springs to fill a booster tank, the rural truck of the Union Fire company, Carlisle, was summoned. By the time the firemen returned to the scene, the flames had spread rapidly through the log and weatherboard structure, and in a few minutes the home was leveled to the foundations.

The dwelling was located south of Mt. Holly Springs in South Middleton township, Cumberland county, close to the Cumberland-Adams county line. Marsh said a small portion of the loss is covered by insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Marsh are parents of John Marsh, noted vaccination foe, whose latest skirmish with compulsory vaccination laws has been appealed to Supreme Court. John Marsh will not allow vaccination of his son.

13-FOOT SWORDFISH HOOKED OFF OSLO

Oslo (AP)—A rare specimen of swordfish, regarded as the largest ever caught in Norwegian waters, was captured in the Oslofjord near here recently.

The animal measured 13 feet, 4 inches, from sword tip to tail and had a weight of 440 pounds, the newspapers reported. Its sword alone had a length of 3 feet 3 inches.

TWO ARTILLERY UNITS IN STATE START TRAINING

National Guardsmen Will Go to Missis- sippi

Harrisburg, Jan. 13 (AP)—Pennsylvania called up two artillery units for training at Fort Shelby, Mississippi, today and swung into full speed in inducting a quota of 3,434 young draftees into the Army for a year of military drill.

Approximately 1,600 Pennsylvania National Guardsmen of the 190th and 166 field artillery regiments were ordered to report to home armories today for a ten-day "incubation" period before leaving for the Mississippi Army post—to be gone for a year or more.

Judge Karl E. Richards, of the Dauphin County Orphans court, presided at farewell ceremonies for today's contingent. Included in the group was his son, Karl Martin Richards, a volunteer.

"This is a solemn moment," Judge Richards said. "You are breaking up home ties and going away to serve your country."

"My son is one of you. It was his own idea to volunteer for training now, but I heartily concurred in it."

Need Self-Discipline

"The trouble with many young people today is that there is not sufficient self-discipline. For that reason I believe that a year of Army life will prove invaluable."

"In reality we are facing an international situation which none of us can fathom. If we do not become involved in the war then you will return with valuable experience."

"If the situation should grow worse then you will be getting in early and consequently will be better off because you will have had valuable training and will be in a position to train those who come after you. Good luck to you all."

Judge Richard gave his son a firm handclasp and went with him to the street where the military cars were waiting to take the men to the Harrisburg military post for final examinations.

First of the draftees—118 of them—were summoned to Harrisburg from surrounding communities and counties on Saturday, and another 121 white men and three negroes reported today, with 131 scheduled for induction tomorrow.

Centers in Wilkes-Barre, Pittsburgh, Altoona, and Philadelphia, will provide the balance of the quota between January 14 and 31.

The 166th regiment's 900 men were assembled from suburban Philadelphia, Waynesboro, Chambersburg, Conshohocken, and Lewis-town.

The 190th, with 700 troops, is composed of units from Tyrone, Altoona, Sunbury, Northumberland, Lock Haven, Bellefonte, Lewisburg, Punxsutawney, DuBois, New Castle and Clearfield.

They form part of the 73rd brigade, under command of Brigadier General William March, of Philadelphia, and were the second Pennsylvania Guard contingent to hear the call to duty.

The first was the 213 coast artillery regiment, which went into federal service at the President's call, at Virginia Beach, Va., last Thanksgiving.

The remainder of the Pennsylvania National Guard, making up the 28th division, is scheduled to encamp at Indiantown gap next month, to form the bulk of that post's expected 22,000 enrollment.

Earle, Bulgarian Envoy, Undergoes Operation

Haverford, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP)—Mrs. George H. Earle, Jr., was informed by cablegram today that her husband, United States minister to Bulgaria and former Pennsylvania governor, underwent an operation at Sofia about a week ago.

She said Earle had recovered from a throat infection, but the message did not make clear whether the infection made the operation necessary or developed later.

OLDEST OLD MILL

Copenhagen (AP)—A register of business firms in Denmark discloses a flour mill 800 years old. Founded about 1100 in Odense, on the island of Funen, by 12 monks, it now is a big modern factory, grinding thousands of tons of flour every year. Another old firm, "The Royal Brewery," has been brewing beer steadily since 1443. Several pharmacies are 500 years old.
